"Becoming of Age: A Conference on Aging" is the title of a three-day conference to be held Monday through Wednesday, Oct. 21-23, at the Northern Hotel, Billings.

The conference, which is being sponsored by the Montana Committee for the Humanities (MCH), an organization based at the University of Montana in Missoula, will begin at 9:30 a.m. Monday with a welcoming address by Dr. Marvin Bulgatz, a professor of psychology at Eastern Montana College in Billings, who is director of the conference.

Panel discussions will include such topics as "The Elderly's Right to Medical Treatment" and "Living Environments for the Aged, A Matter of Choice?".

Noted speakers will include Paul S. Nathanson, executive director of the National Senior Citizen's Law Center in Los Angeles, Calif., and Robert Kastenbaum, chairman of the psychology department at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

The conference is being funded under a $10,000 grant from the MCH, and is the second project funded under the committee's new state theme of "Private Rights and Public Choices."
